Details: This is a beautiful part of the Waithe Beck. In 2011 the LCSP with their partners worked to improve this part of the Waithe Beck. Originally it was an over-widened straight channel suffering from over-shading by trees and scrub. Ten log flow deflectors were installed to help create a sinuous channel to improve flow velocity, and two gravel side berms were installed to reduce bank erosion and create a narrow, deep section to provide habitat for adult fish species such as the brown trout.

A few years on and some of the unwanted scrub is returning which will eventually over-shade the stream once more, so this is where we'd like your help!

The day will mostly involve carefully removing unwanted scrub that is re-establishing itself along the banks. This will hopefully let more light in and help to encourage in-stream vegetation to grow which is essential for the invertebrates in the stream.

This is a beautiful site to work at, comprising of not only the stream, but also a large pond and wooded area maintained as a haven for wildlife by the landowner for many years.
